HE sit in the Evening the Duke de Broylio marched from

Enguen towards Minden, with 16 Companies of Grandiers, 400 Infantry, the Carabineers of his Referve, the Regiments of Schomberg and Nassau, and the Corps of Fischer.

He arrived before Minden at Break of Day, and summened it to surrounder. General Zastrow commanded three a Carrism of 1500 Men; the same Zastrowo-who that so dangerously wounded at the Battle of Lutzelberg. He resused to comply with the Sam-mons, and the Dake coused the Town to be invested. But to sucat the Battle of Lutxelberg. He refused to comply with the Summons, and the Duke coused reb Town to be invosted. But to succeed in this Expedition it was necessary to pass the Wester, and they had no Beats or Ponteons. The Count de Broglio (the Duke's Brother) as he was reconnoiting, pervivers a Pleas of Timber, that was abandoned in a Place which the Enemy, without Dukht, thought out of our Reach. Some Grenadiers immediately some this pass of the Place, and they seem the River, and trought it to the Shore; and upon this Float Fischer's Corps, and 300 Volunteers, get over the River, and immediately shade as Attack on the Head of the Bridge. The Duke sevented the Attack by a Fire from all his Artillary; and Fischer's Troops entered the Place pell-mell; driving before them toose who defunded the Bridge. General Zastrovo and his Garrism of X500 Mess were made Frisners of War. The Magazinist of Minden are estimated at 80,000 Rations of Hay, and 3,500,000 of all Sorts of Grin.

Minden, July 10. Fischer's Grenadiers entered this Town less Night between Eight and Nine. The Duke de Broglio besteemed brither, which 60 Officers; And some Companies of Grenadiers, to assist the Count his Boother in Acoping the Soldiery writhin proper Bounds. These two Lords Bowe agreed to send Fischer's Corps was of the Town with the Sorts.

Gensa, Jum 23. They write from Cadis, that seven Men of War were sailed from thence to join those that are ready at Carthagena; that two more Ships of the Line had taken on board 80,000 Cannon Balls at Barcelona, and that a Squadron of twelve Ships was gone from Ferrol, with Orders to cruize upon the Coast of Spain, where the Algerines are cruising with four Frigates, fix Galliots, and two Kebecks.

Utrecks, July 19. A French Detachment has carried off M. de la Chevalerie, a Hanoverian Colodel, sent by Prince Ferdinand to command, in second, at Munster. There were Ferdinand to command, in second, at Munster. There were about him important Dispatches.

Harover, July 12. As critical as the present Situation of our Assaurant Delawed to be, we are thoroughly reconciled to the Conduct of Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, who are with creat Columnia of Brunswick, conciled to the Conduct of Princs Ferdinand of Brunswick, who acts with great Calmness and Intrepidity, the only Part that is left for him to act. He continues to retire before a superior Army, but retires in a Manner that supports his Reputation as a consummate Officer. His Light-armed Troops come to Action as often as possible, and have gained five confiderable Advantages over the French in one Week 3 in three of which they took the Commanding Officers, and the best Part of the Corps they had to deal with, Prisoners. In short, though we are in a dangerous, we do not think ourselves in a desperate Way. His Highness has still an Army of 50,000 brave Troops, is beloved by his Officers, adored by the Soldiers, and respected by his Enemles.
